My feelings on this matter are, if the local stations don't want to improve their programming and make it easier to understand where & what their talking about, then fine.....leave XM Radio alone! XM is NOT hurting anybody & their weather & road reports have saved us time & our lives. Not to mention, they get right to the point, where the locals like to goof around & give you this local lingo that us truckers (not from that area) don't understand.

Besides that, our LED is out on our AM/FM & I don't have time to play around with it to find a good channel that gives good reports. With XM Radio I can find it fast & easy. While traveling from point A to point B, we can also get reports to the areas that we're headed to, which saves us time & helps us decide which routes we'll be taking to point B.

Please leave XM Radio & it's programs alone. There is a safety factor involved & that's being able to find the road & weather conditions out NOW, instead when the local channels do their hourly reports.

Thank you for Your time,
